Cameleon

Fact sheet · October 2026

Cameleon recolours any website in Safari to one of five skins: three dark, for reading at night, and two light, for a site that is already dark. It changes colour and nothing else, measures the contrast it produces, and remembers your choice for each site.

Midnight	Dusk	Legacy	Sunset	Yardage Book
Dark	Dark	Dark	Light	Light

What it is	Safari extension for the Mac that recolours websites
Platform	Safari on macOS 13 Ventura or later
Latest version	1.0
Price	$3.99 once, no subscription. The download gives seven free days first and its licence covers two Macs; the Mac App Store edition is paid up front.
Distribution	Direct download, signed and notarised by Apple, and on the Mac App Store as Cameleon Skins For Safari since 10 November 2026.
Maker	Caddora, Naas, Co. Kildare, Ireland

Key features

- Colour only. No type moved, no layout changed, nothing hidden. Photographs are left as they are.
- Contrast it measures. Every colour is re-lit until it reads at least 4.5:1 against the furthest surface in the skin. On a Wikipedia article, 18 of 1,662 pieces of text fail that bar in the site's own colours; skinned, none do (measured 3 November 2026).
- Remembered per site, with one default skin for the Mac's light appearance and another for its dark.
- Shortcuts, a Focus filter and a menu bar item can set a skin too.

Privacy

The extension, the half that sees your pages, has no networking code and no permission to open a connection. No account, no analytics, no adverts, no record of what you read. The downloaded edition's app checks a licence key with the shop once, when it is entered; the App Store edition makes no connection at all.